Frequently Asked Questions and Answers

- Q: Is the GEP student required to study at Rutgers University in years 4 and 5?
No. The GEP student chooses to study at one of the GEP partner schools worldwide in years 4 and 5 or to complete four years of study at Tunghai University. The list of GEP partner schools is updated regularly.
- Q: Why is there an additional annual GEP enrollment fee over the study at Tunghai University?
The annual GEP enrollment fee aims to enhance global mobility for the GEP student through multicultural exposures, intensive TOEFL/IELTS/GMAT courses, and personal study and career advice.
- Q: Are all courses taught in English for the GEP student over the study at Tunghai University?
No. The department core courses required for the GEP student are mostly taught in Chinese. As these courses are taught later, the international student in the GEP program benefits from easier adaptation and makes progress in the Chinese language more smoothly over the study in Taiwan.
- Q: Is there any upper limit on admissions to the GEP partner school?
No. The GEP application to the partner school is examined individually without competing against regular applicants worldwide. The admission is not guaranteed, however. With continual and close supervision by the GEP instructors and personal study advisor, successful application is highly expected.
- Q: Can the GEP student change the major in the second degree at the partner school?
Yes. The student can apply for any major offered by the partner school but is required to take sufficient courses related to the initial major for completing the first degree at Tunghai University.
- Q: Can the GEP student quit the GEP program and transfer back to the regular program?
Yes. But the student having quit the GEP program is not allowed to re-enter.
